A new displacement tracking report provides updated data on internal displacement in the country. 580,000 people are displaced nation-wide, a 60 per cent increase since March 2024 and the take over of key infrastructures by gangs. Violence remains overwhelmingly the primary driver of forced displacement.

At the end of June, the first police officers of the Multinational Security Support Mission arrived in Port-au-Prince to strengthen and support the Haitian National Police to improve security in the capital, regain key infrastructure and free areas from gang control.

Forcibly returned migrants from neighbouring countries continued despite high levels of insecurity. June marked the highest number of returns in 2024 with 17,300 migrants, 97% of whom came from the Dominican Republic.

SURVIVING THE TERROR: HOW ADELIE FOUND BACK HOPE IN HAITI

More than half a million people are displaced in Haiti due to gang violence. The needs have doubled over the year 2024, and the financial support from our donors is still necessary to continue transforming other lives like Adelie’s.

"I am deeply grateful for everything that has been offered to me. Aker experiencing the horror of gangs in my neighborhood, it shows that there are still good people in this world, ready to lend a hand to those in need. I can never thank the IOM enough for their help. I had nothing lek, I wouldn’t have been able to pay for this new roof."

Adelie remains hopeful that other people in need will receive assistance, just as she did.

"I know I didn’t live in a rich country, but I never expected things to deteriorate so much. I am nostalgic for the past. Bicentenaire in Port-au-Prince was once a popular destination for tourists and was also visited by many foreign dignitaries. Now, it’s a complete disaster. Vegetation has taken over public buildings, gangs paralyze everything, it’s disheartening. I sincerely hope that all the people in need, like me, will receive some help. We all deserve to live in a country where we can look forward with hope, not despair."

Adelie’s journey is a testament to how humanitarian support can make a significant difference in the lives of vulnerable individuals. It’s a poignant reminder of the importance of solidarity and international assistance to help those forced to flee their homes to rebuild their lives with dignity. IOM remains committed to intensifying its efforts both in emergency response to displacement crises and in sustainable stabilization programs.

Since the end of February, IOM provided nearly 5 million liters of clean water directly in sites reaching 25,000 people, rehabilitated 22 water hand pumps. Distribution of blankets, jerry cans, solar lamps, kitchen sets and plastic sheets reached more than 37,000 people.

IOM and partners are also offering psychosocial support through a free of charge hotline and on the ground, as well as deploy mobile clinics to provide medical assistance for 18,000 people.

IOM also provides awareness raising sessions and organized focus groups discussions on a wide variety of topics: child protection, mental health, accountability, reproductive health, etc. reaching 14,000 people. The Organization also supports IDPs to leave the metropolitan area of Port-au-Prince with transport subsidies and encourages IDPs to find a home through rental subsidies.

IOM urges donors and stakeholders to contribute to tackling the country’s most immediate needs and to support the Organization in its provision of humanitarian and protection assistance to the most affected Haitians.
